Monday Night Money: Financial Self-Reliance for New York's Working Artists

A hands-on program that trains working New York artists to run their careers as small businesses. Classes meet Monday evenings, when most theaters are dark, so working performers can attend.

THE NEED

New York's actors, musicians, dancers, and visual artists are small-business owners in all but name. Most are underemployed, piece together income from many short jobs, and depend on middlemen who decide when, and whether, they get paid. Arts training teaches the craft. Almost no one teaches the business.

WHAT EVERY ARTIST LEAVES WITH

1. A working budget for irregular, gig-based income
2. A savings wallet they control themselves
3. A real payment received into it
4. A published page where fans and clients pay them directly
5. A review of retirement accounts from past jobs

Artists who complete all five earn a BFTA Certificate of Completion.

CURRICULUM

What Is Money? · Budgeting Irregular Income and Pricing Your Work · Getting Paid Directly · Protecting Your Savings · Retirement Accounts for Working Artists · Building Your Audience as a Small Business · Tools That Pay Artists Directly · Your Plan. Bitcoin is taught as one practical tool for direct payment and savings, for use, not speculation.

HOW THE $10,000 IS USED

|---|---|
| 8 Monday classes: teacher fee and platform, 8 at $300 | $2,400 |
| 3 NYC workshops: room, materials, two teachers | $3,900 |
| 2 New York artists trained and paid to assist | $600 |
| Printed workbooks and certificates, about 60 artists | $600 |
| Recording and captioning, 4 sessions | $800 |
| Evaluation: surveys and 6-month follow-up | $500 |
| Outreach to New York artist networks | $300 |
| Administration | $900 |
| Total | $10,000 |

HOW WE MEASURE SUCCESS

- Attendance at every class and workshop
- Surveys before and after each workshop, and 6 months later
- Share of artists completing all five skills
- Recordings published free for artists who cannot attend

TRACK RECORD, FIRST YEAR

- Free eight-session artist curriculum published online
- Share Your Bitcoin Journey podcast: 6,000+ YouTube views
- $3,900 in grants awarded to three artists
- Arts program produced at the Midwest Bitcoin Summit
